
Tradesignal becomes a Trayport Certified Software Provider

London, 3 March, 2016 Trayport, a leading provider of energy trading solutions to traders, brokers and exchanges worldwide, announced today Tradesignal GmbH has successfully been accredited as a Trayport Certified Software Provider (CSP).

Trayport's CSP program is designed to enable third party suppliers connecting to the Trayport system to better support mutual clients. Certification aims to generate lasting and mutually beneficial working relationships between Trayport, providers and the end client.

For Tradesignal, this is a logical step in being able to offer its verified software to the many mutual and potential customers of both firms. Thanks to this certification, users of the Tradesignal software will receive a complete and optimally integrated Trayport API connection. Customers will be able to continue feeding market data into Tradesignal via Trayport for technical analysis, back testing and strategy development.

"We are delighted that Tradesignal have joined the growing number of companies who are now Trayport Certified Software Providers," said Ty Khan, Head of Trader Client Relationship Management at Trayport. "Accreditation certifies Tradesignal as a trusted supplier of software solutions utilising and connecting to Trayport technology. We look forward to a successful working relationship."

"Any trader who uses Tradesignal daily as a decision-making tool needs the best possible and most stable solutions in software and data interfacing," said Mike Cowley, Head of Development at Tradesignal. "The CSP program will increase the quality of service experienced in using Trayport data with our Tradesignal software."

In addition, Kristoffer Mittelstorb, Head of IT & Support at Tradesignal, said "For the customer, Trayport's CSP program is of great significance, because together we can ensure comprehensive product support to meet the demand of future developments."
